"When I started here, the guests would come in November and stay through April. They'd take an hour for breakfast, two hours for lunch and sometimes content themselves through a formal dinner of good food and gentile conversation for three hours. There was a great beauty in the quiet of the dinner." - Bill Davis, Hotel Doorman since 1930

After World War I, barnstorming pilots such as Captain J.O. Jorstad and R.C. "Tex" Marshall frequented the hotel because it served as a navigation point for pilots flying down the coast, and the flat sandy beach provided a good runway. In fact, there were very few airports in Florida, so it made for one of the preferred spots.

In 1913, the hotel hired Ruth Law to offer guests airplane rides during the season. She became the first woman to pilot a plane in Florida and served as the hotel's pilot until 1916. On December 17, 1915, in front of the hotel, she became the first woman in the world to loop an airplane.
